Thank you, Debbie. We'll be checking the NYTimes for Matthew Healey's story tomorrow.

These coins, acquired on average 70 years ago, are quite literally, works of art, the quality of which surpasses anything I can recall being offered. I encouraged every collector I talked to, to view the lots, even just as a spectator, because they'd likely never see coins like this ever again.

Everyone at Heritage Auctions considers the Eric P. Newman Part II auction to be the highlight of not just the auction season, but of our entire numismatic careers.
